All workshops must adhere to the Principles of InterChange:

1. Fosters community-level involvement in peacebuilding and bases its activities and agendas on the needs and priorities of community-based peacebuilders.
2. Recognizes that community-based peacebuilding work is done within, and has implications for, a larger global context.
3. Uses circle-based, participatory, non-hierarchical models for organizational purposes, communication, research, and other activities.
4. Bases partnerships and relationships, especially those that transcend differences, on equality and mutuality.
5. Respects and engages with local and indigenous knowledges, culture and values, recognizing the value of dialogue across different worldviews and perspectives.
6. Values theory and practice equally and sees them as complementary and mutually reinforcing aspects of peacebuilding.
7. Values the contribution of both women and men to peacebuilding research and practice, and encourages research into gender issues and women's peacebuilding roles.
8. Works holistically, engaging heart, mind and spirit.
9. Develops personal relationships as a basis for its peacebuilding work.
10. Recognizes that peacebuilders need friendship, encouragement and validation.

I, _____, declare that my workshop adheres to the Principles of InterChange.
